Both single nucleotide polymorphisms (SNPs) in the excision repair cross complementing group 1 (ERCC1) and 2 (ERCC2) genes are associated with an increased risk of a poor response to platinum-based chemotherapy in advanced-stage non-small-cell lung cancer (NSCLC). Moreover, ERCC2 SNPs influence survival in NSCLC. However, data from other studies are conflicting. We evaluated the impact of ERCC1 and ERCC2 SNPs on survival in a patient series with advanced-stage NSCLC treated with platinum-based combination chemotherapy. Furthermore, we evaluated the effect of ERCC1 and ERCC2 SNPs on the therapeutic efficacy of platinum-based combination chemotherapy in the patients. A total of 246 patients with advanced-stage NSCLC receiving platinum-based combination chemotherapy were genotyped for the ERCC1 rs11615 and ERCC2 rs13181 SNPs. Hazard ratios and 95% confidence intervals were calculated by univariate and multivariate Cox regression analyses. SNPs were also evaluated in relation to survival. According to previous reports, the patients were divided into a favorable-genotype group (GG in ERCC1, TT in ERCC2) and an unfavorable-genotype group (AA in ERCC1, CC in ERCC2). The Kaplan-Meier method was used to assess the impact of SNPs on survival. More patients with ERCC1 AA genotype (96%) and ERCC2 CC genotype (82%) failed to complete the first cycle of chemotherapy compared with the ERCC1 GG genotype (67%; $p < 0.001$) and ERCC2 TT genotype (50%; $p = 0.002$). Furthermore, the unfavorable-genotype group had poorer overall survival (hazard
